

Thornton Reservoir June 2017

There was another good turnout for the first CWAM Club Sunday in June with much of the talk being centred on European holidays past and future. Two of our stalwarts, Keith and Ian had just returned from Interide's tour of the Normandy Battlefields which proved as good if not better than promised in David's & Richard's talk at our March Club Night. Sadly their travels were not posted on Facebook but hopefully we may look forward to an illustrated item in the newsletter which may encourage others to venture to foreign fields.

By the time everyone had paired up with their associates there were nine of us were left and the decision was made to venture as far as Thornton Reservoir. After some deliberation about the best route Ian C led the first half and the other Ian C led the second half. It has to be said the between them they produced a cracking route which enabled us leave a wake of frantically bobbing Cow Parsley across the Leicestershire countryside. At school the naughty boys congregated behind the bike sheds, at CWAM they disport behind the greenhouses at Thornton Nurseries where a reasonable teacake is to be had and the staff are very accommodating when it come to rustling up extra tables and chairs.

Ian Collard continued his bravura performance and decanted the group around the A5 where Trev took over to take us back to Shilton. Home by 1:04pm with a fuel tank blinking on empty; perfectamundo. A route that definitely bears repetition, thanks to the two Ians for a great morning.
